

The Kinetico Collector

A publication of Kinetico Studios featuring the art of Gordon Bradt

Issue No. 3

Summer 2012

The Collector No. 3

The Kinetico Collector Issue No. 3 is a long overdue update for owners and lovers of Gordon Bradt's sculptures and clocks.

Grandfather Clock

2012 begins a new era at Kinetico Studios, with Gordon's daughter, Terri Bradt and her husband Terry Clark engineering a new Eight Man Grandfather Clock by Gordon Bradt. This clock is made from the base metals of brass and copper, and features a pendulum instead of the climbing man. Contact Terri for pricing and availability.

Bradt Biography

Gordon Bradt was born 5/2/1924. He just celebrated his 88th birthday!

Research into our updated website provides a look at Gordon's family life and career, including how he formed Kinetico Studios. But his family is very proud of his World War II experience and his 2000 pages of letters home that are scanned and archived with other Kinetico documents and photos at our studios on Kinetico Mountain. These letters reveal intimate details of one young man's engineering background in the Army, and his participation in the Battle of the Bulge, where he earned a purple heart and a bronze star. A drawing he made entitled "My Ambition" shows what he really wanted to do in the Army!

You Tube Videos

Kinetico Studios has uploaded 12 videos of our kinetic clock sculptures to YouTube. To find our channel, search for our user name, "kineticostudios" on YouTube. In the process you will find hundreds of other user's videos of our sculptures. So, enjoy the new technology!

Patent Poster

Gordon Bradt created this poster featuring his many patents earned for designing camera mechanisms at Bell & Howell and for his own inventions since he started Kinetico Studios. Contact Terri Bradt to order this beautiful giclee print to display with your Kinetico clock.

Kinetico Studios
302 Kinetico Road
Eureka Springs, AR 72631
479-253-5331

www.gordonbradt.com
terri@arkansas.net